Weekly Series

Week 1. Why is redistricting important?

a. Redistricting is important because if we didn't adjust for changes in population growth, voters in a district with fewer voters would see their political power as stronger than voters in districts that have more people. The legal principle of "one man, one vote" comes out of redistricting. We change the district lines so a voter in one district is on equal political standing to a voter in another district.

Week 2. What are districts?

a. According to the Election Assistance Commission, a district is a political subdivision established within a specific geographic area. Ohio is a district, Butler County is a district, the city or township you live in is a district.
